

EMERGENCY SURVIVAL KIT

ON PAPER

While we strongly recommend having “survival kits” at home and away for any emergencies that you may encounter in today’s hazardous world, the value of having essential information immediately available must not be overlooked. A short delay in contacting critical services or obtaining critical information can result in unnecessary damages, suffering and fatalities in an emergency. In some kinds of emergencies you may be unconscious or too distracted to remember critical phone numbers and other information. We offer the three cards on the reverse side of this sheet to help assure your safety and survival. Take time to fill them out and place them now.

Situation #1

Someone in your home becomes suddenly ill. You call 911, but you may also need to contact the poison control center or the victim’s doctor immediately. The numbers you need are on card #1 on your refrigerator or by your phone.

Situation #2

Your electricity has gone off, or your water is not running, or you smell gas, or a water main has burst and your basement is flooding. You don’t have to waste time fumbling through the phone book (if you can find one) because those numbers to are on card #1 on your refrigerator or by your phone.

Situation #3

While you are away from home there is a fire or a burglary. The police or fire department are able to contact you because you have listed a contact number on card #2 placed inside you front door or in another easy to see location. You may also want to give a copy of this card to a trusted neighbor.

Situation #4

You are involved in a serious accident or become seriously ill while away from home. Emergency responders are able to contact your family and access life saving medical information from card #3 that you carry with you. We recommend that you copy and laminate a completed card for every family member.
